V'ger applications shine with new web interface

New user interface concept offers added value to all NOVUM customers

Nuremberg, 14.11.2016: NOVUM GmbH is now offering its V'ger insurance software solutions with a new web interface.

“The experience from a great many customer projects has culminated in our new web client“, explains Michael Kraus, managing director of NOVUM GmbH. “The main focus of the development was to achieve a high degree of flexibility in the design of the screens and to ensure maximum user friendliness.“

This applies not only to the modern and attractive interface design and an ergonomic layout of data fields and buttons but above all to the possibility to put together and design screens individually according to the requirements of the special roles in the processing phase. And all that with as little effort as possible and without encroaching on the underlying data structures. Customers can therefore configure role- and user-specific screens themselves without impairing the release stability of the application.

Ibrahim Hadziavdic, responsible for developing the web client, summarises the objective as follows: “Our new interface makes use of the latest web technologies to provide our users with precisely the view of the data they need for the work at hand. We therefore avoid time-consuming clicking backwards and forwards and changing frequently between different views, and ultimately accelerate customer processes.“

The new web client is available for all V'ger-based standard and individual solutions and can be used both on mobile terminal devices and on desktop devices.

Showing just one example of how real added value is created for the user with a contemporary compilation of information or input screens, Hadziavdic presents an overview screen from a customer project: in addition to the partner data, the clerk sees all current contracts, registered claims and calculations of the claims ratio and rating of the partner in this 360° view. Details can be requested on all displayed data at a click. Web content can also be faded in to the screen. An aspect of special interest to sales staff in the example is the customer's address shown as a card view.
